Our November 1st Lunch-and-Learn Speaker

David Soike

Interim Executive Director / Port of Seattle

David Soike brings an extraordinary amount of knowledge and deep experience to his role as Interim Executive Director, having worked for the Port of Seattle since 1980. He has served as the CEO's delegate since being named Chief Operating Officer (COO) in March 2016, acting on a wide range of issues across the Port.

He began his career as a junior engineer in the Port's Corporate Engineering Department, quickly advancing into positions in Project Management, and both Maritime and Aviation divisions. Prior to serving as COO, Soike provided strong senior leadership to more than 375 employees in Aviation Facilities and Infrastructure, Aviation Maintenance, and the Aviation Building Department and Conference Center.

Soike has demonstrated a strong track record delivering effective large-scale and complex projects, and the ability to drive new strategic initiatives, such as Lean process improvements, which he brought to the Port. He has managed significant capital improvement projects at Sea-Tac Airport, where he also served as deputy director of aviation and senior operations manager. He has experience in finance, planning, program management, and marketing across the Port's Maritime, Aviation, and Corporate Divisions.

With a talent for building relationships with a diversity of groups and employees, Soike's contributions strengthened the Port's ability to meet our Century Agenda goals and support job creation throughout the region.

The Centers of Expertise for Environment and Sustainability, Strategic Initiatives, Capital Development, as well as Police and Emergency Management reported to Soike in his role as COO. As the Interim CEO, all members of the Executive Leadership Team report to him.

Soike holds a master's degree in business administration from the University of Washington and a bachelor's of science degree in civil engineering from Washington State University.
